Service providers

Few companies that sell cosmetic products still carry out the production process themselves. Whilst at one time a suite of production machines would run for decades with no problems, today it is often worn out in just a few years. But now there are plenty of service providers who take on the task of development, production and packaging - but sorting the wheat from the chaff is a real challenge. In our brand new, fully updated market survey we list 182 suppliers. At a glance you can see clearly which companies offer which services, and what their specialities are.

Full service contract suppliers are more and more sought-after today. This means that not only is the product developed, produced and packed by an external supplier, but also that the same supplier will supply the packaging, and after product filling will despatch the products to the appropriate distributors.

Only a few years ago "Full Service" from a packaging service provider meant, at the most, obtaining all of the packaging components from one source. Today, however, the packaging suppliers are tending to offer more in-depth services concerned with product handling. In our survey we have listed 85 different full-contract suppliers. In total they are, at 52 percent, the majority of the suppliers listed here.

In addition, at a time when the new cosmetics directive is coming into force, there is an increased demand for external service providers who are in a position to carry out safety evaluations. It is a fact that the required evidence of product safety has become much more specific and more demanding in the new cosmetics directive. And those service providers who are in a position to carry out efficacy tests will also be much more in demand. Our list of service providers, laid out in tabular format, gives you, at a glance, 32 companies with suitable laboratory services – representing 19 percent of the companies listed.

Would you like your company to be listed in our survey? No problem! You can take action now to ensure that you are included in the 2012 survey. You can simply download the entry form from www.cossmacom/marktuebersicht, fill it in and send it back to us.
