

Service providers

This market survey featuring a large variety of service providers has just been updated. Thus, you have all the relevant companies at a glance and see what their main fields of activity are.

Offering products at competitive prices is something that challenges everyone who offers personal care products and wants to be running a profitable business at the same time. So why not re-assess your production process once in a while? Especially if there are some processes that your company does not handle in-house. After all, even if you are satisfied with your service provider, there might be others out there offering a better service at a better price.

On the other hand, you might find out that the service provided to your company is somewhat outdated in comparison to that of other providers.

Or you might realise that it could be a better idea to transfer certain working processes that used to be done with the help of external service providers back in-house.

If outdated processes cost more time than necessary you might lose track of what you are really good at. Sometimes it is easy to reduce unnecessary costs by simply reducing the number of employees on the payroll and transferring their workload to external providers. However, it can also be a risk outsourcing valuable know-how.

Or what if you were always convinced that doing things in-house was a better choice, but now you realise that modernising things would be so expensive that it is a better idea to transfer certain jobs to a service provider?

There are endless possibilities. But whatever the situation is, it is always a good

Cornelius advises new skin care routines needed for change of seasons

Speciality ingredients distributor and manufacturer, Cornelius Group, examines the skincare products which help to avoid dryness and redness during the winter months and keep skin complexion radiant.

During the Winter skin sebum levels are reduced and Trans Epidermal Water Loss (TEWL) increases. Combined with a drop in skin moisturisation and elasticity, the result is dry, tight skin which requires intensive nourishment and a bit of tender, loving care.

Skincare products, designed to address problems caused by colder temperatures, tend to be thicker and heavier as the oil phase ratio is increased to feed and protect the skin from the elements.

Products should have a higher emollient content and ideally provide an occlusive effect to counter the barrier damage. Any actives included should be focused on moisturising, lipid boosting and improving barrier function.

The new emulsifier from BASF, Emulgade® Sucro Plus (INCI: Sucrose Polystearate, Cetyl Palmitate), is naturally derived, mild and forms lamellar structures which help to moisturise dry skin. It also provides excellent cushioning and absorption leaving a silky feel to the skin.

Combining this with the recently launched Creamy Shea from Olvea (INCI: Shea Butter Glycerides) will result in a rich, creamy formulation with enhanced skin sensorial properties and will boost barrier function. Actives such as Glycorepair® from carob seeds will also speed up barrier recovery for damaged skin and is particularly suitable for intensive lip balms to repair cracked lips.

Wash products should incorporate mild, non-drying surfactants such as Patinonic ISL (INCI: Sodium Isostearoyl Lactylate) which has been proven in independent clinical trials to moisturise skin for up to four hours when used in a wash product.

The inclusion of Lamesoft® PO65 (INCI: Coco-glucoside (and) Glycerol Oleate) will provide lipid layer enhancement properties to shower products leaving the skin feeling smooth and moisturised; whilst the addition of Lamesoft® OD (INCI: Coco Caprylate (and) Lauryl Glucoside (and) Glycerine (and) Polyglyceryl-2 Dipolyhydroxystearate (and) Polyglyceryl-3 Diisostearate) will ensure a high amount of nourishing oil is deposited onto the skin from the formulation.

Winter is also the party season for many; a time for glitter, glamour and sparkle. Incorporating pearlescent pigments into winter products can complement pale skin and create dazzling, eye catching effects. Chione™ HD Digital pink is a synthetic mica based on fluorphlogopite which can subtly boost radiance and luminosity giving the skin an instant healthy glow.

New from BASF is Chione™ Celestial Gold, again this is a fluorphlogopite based pearl, with a white gold colour shade and a shimmering glow and shine. It has a large particle size but this does not compromise the feel of the product on the skin, making it perfect for adding premium effects to body and décolletage products.

It's easily forgotten how delicate faces are when exposed to the harsh cold weather and it's important to alter skin care routines to reflect the change in seasons. By implementing some simple changes in a skincare routine, skin can stay healthy looking all year round.

Complementing its diverse range of cosmetics ingredients, Cornelius delivers innovative raw materials for the hair, skin, sun, wash and oral care markets.

Cornelius partners with world leaders in the development and production of cosmetics raw materials, producing an excellent range of new and exciting ingredients.
